MicroPayments

Heartland InfoCentral

Heartland, as the leader in micropayments processing, has developed reporting which helps customers lower fees and decrease administrative cost and burden.

As micropayments rapidly expand in industries such as vending and laundry, customers need reporting which allows them to link many TIDs to one MID, but report all fees at the individual TID level. A typical example is vending, where one MID may have many vending machines (TIDs) linked to it, representing multiple customer locations. The vending operator needs fees at a TID level in order to accurately pay customer commissions.

Heartland Payment Systems offers our customers detailed reporting for both revenue and fees for:

- Chain level
- Merchant ID level
- Terminal level

Heartland InfoCentral

At an individual merchant account level, the Merchant Fee Summary by Terminal Report is a report for a single MID which details the terminals that have reported revenue within a specified date range. Along with the net sales reported, the report provides the interchange fees, the discount fees, the HPS processing fees, and transaction fees charged by the credit card processors for each of the terminals reporting revenue.

This report allows a merchant to report by terminal, location or device, the revenue and fees for each device installed for the MID.

Heartland also offers this level of detail at the Chain level. For merchants who operate many MIDs in their portfolio, Heartland provides the ability to “chain” those MIDs together so that all data is available in a single report.

The Chain Merchant Fee Summary by Terminal Report offers the same level of detail as the Merchant Fee Summary by Terminal Report and includes all MIDs associated with the chain.
